Tee-shirt helps build a political bridge

THE TIMES

WAITSBURG — A Waitsburg couple is pleased with the community's response to their efforts to bridge the divide during these fraught political times.

At his wife's suggestion, Tom Elstrom searched online for a tee shirt that combined the "Let's talk!" imperative with the symbols representing the two major political parties. Finding nothing, he bought some digital art and had a tee shirt shop add the type and create a single shirt.

The response was phenomenal as he wore the shirt around town and to various public events.

"The shirt speaks before I do, leading to better conversations than expected. People spoke from the heart and asked where I got the shirt," said Elstrom.

As a result, the Elstroms have made the shirts available for purchase. For more information, email letstalkamericanow@gmail.com.

CARDINALS NEST ON HIATUS

By Lane Gwinn | THE TIMES

WALLA WALLA — On August 22, Waitsburg School District posted that the Cardinals Nest, the non-profit afterschool program, would not be operating this fall. The Cardinals Nest Board made the difficult decision based on various factors that impacted its ability to offer the program at this time. The board said it would reassess in Spring 2025.

For over 20 years, the Cardinals Nest has offered afterschool snacks, homework help, and art, science, and music projects to the district's students. Kathy Carpenter, a Cardinal's Nest board member and past program coordinator, recognized the need for an afterschool program in 2003. The school received a five-year grant through the 21st Century Community Learning Center program, and the idea took off.

In 2008, the school district allowed the program to continue after the grant ran out. Since then, funding has come from parents, community benefactors, grants, and minimal fees.

Walla Walla Fair & Frontier Days 2024

By Karen Huwe | THE TIMES

WALLA WALLA — There was something for everyone at the Walla Walla Fair & Frontier Days in Walla Walla. This year's The G.O.A.T. theme brought a country superstar headliner, PRC Rodeo, and a sold-out demolition derby.

Fair Queen Makenna Barron cut the ribbon in front of the main gate on Wednesday, August 28, to open the 158th annual fair. Headliner Martina McBride with Cody Beebe kicked off the weekend's entertainment lineup. Musical performances continued throughout the three days on the Pepsi and the Banner Bank/Wildhorse Resort & Casino Many Waters stages.

The traditionally sold-out demolition derby followed on Thursday night and provided a lot of thrills for the audience during the heat races. Several Waitsburg alums raced and wrecked during the races. Zac and Amy Bly, Levi Boudrieau, McKellyn Bradham, Garrett Palmer, Steve Bly, Alex Breland, and senior Cougar Anderson raced

AT THE LIBERTY: “Harold and the Purple Crayon”

THE TIMES

DAYTON — As a character in a book, adventurous Harold (Zachary Levi) can make anything come to life simply by drawing it. After he grows up, Harold draws himself off the book’s pages and into the physical world.

In “Harold and the Purple Crayon,” Harold learns much about real life and how his crayon can set off hilarious hijinks. He also realizes the crayon is a powerful source of unlimited imagination. If it falls into the wrong hands (it does,) it will take all of Harold and his friends’ creativity to save the real world and his imaginary one. Harold and the Purple Crayon is the first film based on the 1930s children’s classic that has captivated young readers for decades. The movie serves as a sequel to the original story, following Harold after he grows up.

“Rotten Tomatoes” critics gave this movie a low 26% favorability rating. However, audiences loved this live-action family film, giving it a 92%.

The IMDb website’s parent’s guide rated this movie as moderate for violence and gore; all other categories were either none or mild. The film is rated PG for mild action and thematic elements. It has a runtime of 90 minutes.

Phone and Internet Discounts Available to CenturyLink Customers

The Washington Utilities and Transportation Commission designated CenturyLink as an Eligible Telecommunications Carrier within its service area for universal service purposes. CenturyLink’s basic local service rates for residential voice lines are $32.00 per month and business services are $48.50 per month. Specific rates will be provided upon request.

CenturyLink participates in the Lifeline program, which makes residential telephone or qualifying broadband service more affordable to eligible low-income individuals and families. Eligible customers may qualify for Lifeline discounts of $5.25/month for voice or bundled voice service or $9.25/month for qualifying broadband or broadband bundles. Residents who live on federally recognized Tribal Lands may qualify for additional Tribal benefits if they participate in certain additional federal eligibility programs. The Lifeline discount is available for only one telephone or qualifying broadband service per household, which can be either a wireline or wireless service. Broadband speeds must be at least 25 Mbps download and 3 Mbps upload to qualify.

A household is defined as any individual or group of individuals who live together at the same address and share income and expenses. Services are not transferable, and only eligible consumers may enroll in these programs. Consumers who willfully make false statements to obtain these discounts can be punished by fine or imprisonment and can be barred from these programs.

If you live in a CenturyLink service area, visit <https://www.centurylink.com/aboutus/community/community-development/lifeline.html> for additional information about applying for these programs or call 1-800-201-4099 with questions.

TIMES RENEWAL

To the Editor

It is with pleasure that I am renewing my subscription to “The Times,” and I want to take this opportunity to congratulate Lane on her quality publication. We are all aware of the severe challenges faced by both small and large newspapers across the country, and I am so grateful that she is managing to continue her craft.

There is much that I appreciate each week besides the quality local news coverage. Brad Trumbo shares his love of bird hunting, nature, and life on a farm (where I spent many hours in my youth) with a remarkably poetic writing style. I’m fascinated by his words as much as the content of his articles.

I’m always eager to see where Karen Huwe and her family are traveling to, inspiring us to explore places that don’t necessarily involve an airplane ride. Vicki Sternfeld-Rossi amuses me with her ‘garden rodeo queen’ stories and gets my respect as well as sympathy for being an intrepid owner of a home that was very old when I was a kid.

The Pioneer Portraits is also a favorite. Several years ago, I posted on social media that, “You know you are old when the ‘Pioneer Portraits’ for 50 years ago was about YOU, and you were already well into grade school at the time!”

And it’s great to see the Letters to Santa, pictures, and activities of kids whose grandparents I grew up with. I also get a kick out of my friend Jimmye Turner’s “The Friendly Forest” comic strip, and love Bill Rodger’s stunning photos of the countryside I grew up in. The community service that the Last Page serves should not be overlooked. I have traveled to Waitsburg myself to enjoy events I’ve read about there. And here’s wishing the best to Luke at graduate school; your recipes will be missed, whether I actually gave them a try or just drooled over them.

When my mom passed away, I let my subscription lapse for a while. It made sense from a ‘belt-tightening’ standpoint, as I no longer had any family ties to Waitsburg. But I missed the weekly, for all the reasons I have listed and more. I sincerely appreciate its robust diversity of features and how the paper keeps me connected to my roots.

This letter is both a vote of confidence and a call for continued support of “The Times.” According to PBS’s Judy Woodruff in August of 2023, “about 2,500 local newspapers, a quarter of the total, have folded since 2005...depriving the communities of some of the glue that holds them together.” Please join me in helping to sustain this integral part of Waitsburg and surrounding towns, by keeping your subscriptions current, by giving gift subscriptions to former residents, and by purchasing advertising space for your business or event. Think of it as an investment in your quality of life.

CARDINALS AT POMEROY JAMBOREE

By Karen Huwe | THE TIMES

WAITSBURG — Coach Gabe Kiefel's Waitsburg High School football team worked out some kinks in a jamboree at Pomeroy on Friday, August 30. "It went well, and every player who went was able to do good things on the field, including the freshmen who went in at the end," said Kiefel. The Cardinals played ten plays each on defense against Garfield-Palouse and Touchet and ten plays each on offense against Liberty-Christian and Pomeroy. The team held Garl-Pal to one touchdown and did really well against Touchet, holding them scoreless. On offense, the Cardinals had trouble making much happen against Liberty-Christian who had a blitzing linebacker. Even though the Cardinals did not score, they had some positive yards. The team looked better against Pomeroy. Waitsburg scored on the first drive with a pass play from Isa Reyes to Jayton Gleason. "We were missing a big chunk of our starting players due to the Walla Walla County Fair, family trips, health and eligibility. I think we will do much better with our full squad," said Kiefel. There were stand-out performances by Lucas VanHoose at running back, Jared Hankins at defensive end, Tucker Hamilton at linebacker, and Jackson Karl at linebacker. The team showed resilience that Coach Kiefel hopes they will not have to depend on for the regular season. The Cardinals' first game of the season will be at Desales on September 5.

through the dust and crashed into the tires. Stan Bly, Fair and Frontier Days Board Vice-President, was recognized for his many years of service as the demolition derby coordinator. The PRCA rodeo was held on Friday, Saturday, and Sunday nights. The pro rodeo events included bareback riding, breakaway roping, saddle bronc riding, bull riding, and barrel racing. Fair visitors enjoyed the kids' farm center, antique tractors, and outdoor displays. They supported youth who showed steers, swine, goats, lambs, chickens, and horses. The Pavilion hosted vendor booths and youth agriculture, scouting, photography, and fine arts exhibits. As always, the many carnival rides and tasty selection of carnival food were a hit. The fair also offered barnyard races with duck, pig, and lamb competitors. Another highlight was the Sea Lions Splash Show, where the sea lions performed skits and posed for photos afterward. They sunned themselves on the stage or splashed in the water between shows. The Walla Walla County Cattlemen's Association held the Youth Market Sale on Sunday. The sale began with the heartbreaking news of the loss of a young exhibitor from Waitsburg, Sean Sollars. After an outpouring from the community, The Walla Walla County Cattlemen's Association provided a path to honor Sean by supporting his steer in the sale. This year, the FFA, 4-H, and all the participants showed their strong sense of community and family. The G.O.A.T. was another successful Walla Walla Fair and Frontier Days Fair, with special thanks to all the volunteers, participants, and the Fair Board Directors.

Palouse Outdoors:
The Bulls of Astoria

By Brad Trumbo | THE TIMES

September is an incredible time in the Pacific Northwest. Fall is finally upon us, and the heat of the summer fades into brisk, starry nights. Fishing picks up again, and hunting seasons open. While we look forward to fall in our neck of the woods, September on the lower Columbia River also has plenty to offer.

When my hometown buddy, Matt, called with a request to fish the Columbia River for fall Chinook, I had no choice but to invite him out for a west coast road trip that would land us in Astoria for a few days. I had never spent time in the northwest tip of Oregon, and the excuse to see new territory and sink lines for salmon was as good as any.

I had heard tales of “Buoy 10”, how big and bright the salmon were, and how rough the river under tidal influence could be. To experience it firsthand was something different.

Matt and I jumped aboard a twenty-foot open-hull sled with two other strangers and a guide. The overcast sky was ominous, threatening an unknown amount of rain at any time, but the wind was calm. We motored into the river from the harbor in Warrenton and joined the sea of other fishing boats trolling the same circuit in search of bright coho salmon. Coho were on the keeper list, although catching a big Chinook was an unspoken hope for all.

Cut plug herring behind dodgers were spooled out, and rods locked into holders, allowing the clientele to sit back and chat while the bait and trolling speed worked their magic. I’ve always found trolling and fishing in crowded areas detrimental to the experience. Still, as a rod that was lifelessly bobbing on the gunnel suddenly slammed over double, the entire world narrowed to a singular focus.

Matt was first on the rod, and upon retrieving it from the gunnel, he locked the spool and leaned into a solid fish. The heavy rod bounced, pulling Matt toward the gunnel, while the drag zinged that sweet, hollow aluminum spool hum as the fish made several moderate runs. Minutes later, a flash appeared, and the guide stepped in with the net. A bright, beefy coho was an exciting catch to kick the skunk and any boredom off the boat.

Everyone aboard had limited out on coho, but it seemed the last of the run had passed upstream when it came to catching my limit. As time passed the six-hour mark, we turned downriver toward the salt. Our guide was determined to put me on a second coho and we had yet to fish Buoy 10. The swells from the ocean were big and rolling, yet tolerable for a certain fisherman prone to seasickness. Only minutes into the drift, one of the stout rods doubled down.

Upon grabbing the rod, my only defense was to hang on. The fight of the fish was bullish, stronger than any we had boated prior. Long, drag-peeling runs repeatedly took back any line gained. Its speed was unmatched by any of the prior catches, and it refused to reveal itself before finally succumbing to fatigue. A dime-bright Chinook rolled along the boat as the guide scooped it with the net.

A beautiful “Bouy 10” fall Chinook fresh in from the ocean.

I had never seen a Chinook fresh from the salt – a stunning sight, boasting a deep teal dorsal, mirror shine on its lateral scales, and inverse coal black speckling – a pure mimic of the riverine environment when viewed from any angle. It was small for a Chinook, but its fight was that of a much larger fish. As it vanished into the rolling flow to continue its spawning migration, I could only imagine the bullish fight of a bright Chinook that was 30 or more pounds.

The Chinook put a bow on the day, and with a bit of encouragement, our guide forfeited the hunt for my coho limit and motored into a nearby inlet to pull some crab pots, the day ending with a haul of fresh Dungeness and some fine salmon filets.

Matt once again climbed aboard the guide’s vessel the following morning while I explored the history of Fort Stevens and sought bulls of another kind. Fort Stevens’ prominent Roosevelt elk herd was feeding along the banks of the Columbia River. Five tawny bulls with heads and antlers as dark as molasses fed in the senescing grasses along Jetty Lagoon. The pile dike breakwater, and Astoria-Megler Bridge provided a unique backdrop for the unfettered herd.

Small flocks of waterfowl flew overhead, and the air tasted of saltwater. Sea lions bellowed from the broken-down remains of the Columbia River seawall beyond the surf. Their presence was made clear mainly by the pungent odor of livestock.

The elk couldn’t have cared less about being watched as they went about their business. Occasionally, they would test one another with aggressive posture before returning to breakfast. Being accustomed to hunting elk in the mountains made this herd feeding at sea level in the faint orange glow of dawn seem surreal, and packing out could never be easier.

Matt’s day concluded with another haul of coho and crab, and we processed the bounty before turning in for the night. The morning would bring more miles in search of waterfalls, rocky beaches, and, eventually, the mammoth northern California redwoods. The cool and damp coastal days were a pleasant break from the heat of the Blues. If you are ready for fall and could use a primer for the upcoming fishing and hunting seasons, experiences to be had downriver are rejuvenating and bound to spark your enthusiasm for the coming months.

have all the seasons gone?

By Vicki Sternfeld-Rossi | THE TIMES

I wrote a column a few months ago about recognizing the seasons by the bugs that show up, but in retrospect, I’m not sure that is the best determinant. I’ve seen my share of bees and hoverflies this summer, but not like the swarms of past summers. It also seems that ladybugs are in short supply this year. I did need to thwart a minor invasion of squash bugs using an organic spray and marigolds planted throughout the garden.

Thankfully, we haven’t had a bumper crop of summer squash, aka zucchini, because that gets tiresome. This fall, I plan to enjoy our bounty of acorn squash, which, along with our spaghetti squash, is thriving.

Don’t get me wrong, I don’t miss the onslaught of flies, bees, wasps, and other random pests, but did summer seem to fly by and take the inevitable summer insect population? I remember a few weeks of miserable heat, and then, boom, we’ve started to have cooler evenings and mornings without the heat drying out the garden.

This past winter felt like it dragged on, especially with our longer sub-zero days. It felt like it took forever to turn to spring. There were some teases, a few good days, then back to the cold, wet weather. Finally, it was spring, and then, in a flash, it was summer. And now, I can’t believe I’m heading to Costco this week to buy Halloween candy and tulip bulbs. I wouldn’t be surprised if the music track at the store is Christmas carols and there will be Thanksgiving turkeys on sale.

Last year, we had a bounty of green tomatoes left after the first frost. We picked all 33 pounds, and Daniel decided to make green tomato chutney, which he bagged and put in the root/wine cellar. The mice scored big, and we ended up with nothing. It turned out that food-saver bags are not mouse-proof. It won’t be an issue this year as our tomato crop has been sad, so there is not much for us, or the mice, to snack on.

This Sunday, I decided it had cooled down enough to plant lettuce. Before planting, I needed to clean out the dead summer plants. After pulling out the dead lettuce and string beans, I began a three-hour siege of pulling out oregano. If left unchecked, I have learned that oregano is more invasive than mint. Something I thought was impossible. It spreads, has deep roots, and even though it smells beautiful, it’s a very prolific but annoying weed disguised as an herb.

Because our garden didn’t produce more than three cucumbers this year and no tomatoes larger than the cherry tomatoes, I’ve been taking advantage of our coop garden membership. The only problem is that I tend to get overly ambitious, and when I get home and unload my car, I have enough vegetables to open a farmer’s stand. There is no tennis tomorrow, so my day will be spent making more tomato sauce, eggplant salad, and maybe even more ratatouille to add to the five bags already in the freezer.

But, while it’s still warm enough to drive with the top down, I will enjoy what’s left of the summer before the barrage of box bugs, blue gnats, and spiders. It is still pleasant out on the deck and pergola. We don’t need air conditioning, and so far, there are no blankets.

Waitsburg – Eight-year-old Makenna Barron says she can only recall one of the two times she attended the Pendleton Round-Up. She will attend for her third time next week and this visit she won't forget. The pint-sized cowgirl will kick off the week of rodeos by singing the national anthem in the Happy Canyon arena at Monday's opening night PBR Classic rodeo. Makenna, who reigned as Miss Rodeo Washington Sweetheart last year, has rodeo in her blood. Her mom, Tracy Barron, belonged to the Pro West Rodeo Association when Makenna was born and included her from the start. "She was born in February and the rodeos began in April. We would go to three or four events a weekend," said Tracy. At two, Makenna struck out on her own and began competing in Pee Wee Barrel Racing and Goat Tail Tying. Makenna began singing the national anthem at rodeos two years ago when her dad, Charlie, was on the Columbia County Fair Board and organizing the rodeo there. She has never had voice lessons. When asked if she had to learn the words Makenna said, "I already knew them. I've been in a lot of rodeos!" She has opened Dayton's rodeo for the last two years. Last year Makenna decided to see if she had what it takes to entertain the crowd at the Pendleton Round-Up.

Extra Creamy Chocolate Mousse w/Meringue & A Classic Manhattan

In February, I wanted to celebrate my father Carl's 100th birthday with his favorite birthday beverage – a Manhattan cocktail and a decadent dessert. Although he passed in 2022, having a party with friends and family to acknowledge his 98 years was significant.

My dad was born on a dining room table in the house he grew up in just north of Green Lake, outside the then-Seattle city limit.

He was a WWII veteran and was married to my mother, Pat, for over 63 years until she passed. He built their retirement home on Hood Canal, where he lived the rest of his life. It is also where we had his 100th birthday party.

So, what does one serve with a Manhattan? Of course, I went to the internet, and something chocolate came up as a good choice. Narrowing it down, I chose a creamy chocolate mousse and a classic rye Manhattan. These recipes proved to be the perfect pairing.

Classic Rye Manhattan

Prep Time: 3 Mins

This classic cocktail is made with a simple mix of whiskey, sweet vermouth, and bitters. A sweet cocktail cherry is the signature garnish.

Ingredients:

- 2 oz of your favorite rye whiskey
- 1 oz sweet vermouth
- 2 dashes of Angostura bitters

Directions:

Combine all ingredients in a mixing glass and fill it about 3/4 with ice. Stir until very cold, about 30 seconds. Strain the liquid into a chilled cocktail glass.

Garnish with a cocktail cherry or an expressed lemon or orange twist.

Notes:

You can substitute rye whiskey for bourbon. For best results, look for gourmet cocktail Marachino Cherries. Luxardo Gourmet Cocktail Marachino Cherries is one of my favorites.

Extra-Creamy Chocolate Mousse

Total Time: 40 mins Yield: 10 to 12

Ingredients:

- 1 cup sugar
- 1/4 cup water
- 3 large egg whites at room temperature
- 14 ounces bittersweet chocolate, preferably 70 percent, finely chopped
- 1 cup whole milk
- 2 cups cold heavy cream

Directions:

In a small saucepan, combine the sugar and water and bring to a boil over moderately high heat. Cook, without stirring, until the syrup reaches 250° on a candy thermometer, 4 to 6 minutes.

Meanwhile, in the bowl of a stand mixer fitted with the whisk, beat the egg whites at medium-high speed until soft peaks form. With the mixer on, gradually pour in the hot syrup in a steady stream and beat at high speed until the whites are stiff, 2 to 3 minutes. Cover the meringue with plastic wrap and let stand at room temperature.

Put the chocolate in a heatproof bowl. In a small saucepan, heat the milk just to a simmer. Pour the milk over the chocolate and let stand for 1 minute, then stir until smooth and cool.

In a bowl, beat the cream to soft peaks—reserve 1/2 cup of the whipped cream for serving.

Scoop half of the meringue into a bowl (reserve the rest for another use). Whisk in the remaining whipped cream.

Warm the chocolate mixture in a bowl set over a pan of simmering water, stirring, until just melted. Pour the chocolate over the meringue and quickly fold it in. Spoon the mousse into glasses, swirl in the reserved whipped cream, and serve.

Notes:

Make the elements for the mousse ahead of time.

The meringue can be refrigerated overnight. The chocolate can stand at room temperature overnight, covered with plastic wrap.

PS - Mom's 100th is next year - I wonder what goes with Rosé on ice...
