BEST KIND OF PLOT TWIST

By Lane Gwinn | THE TIMES

WAITSBURG—The Waitsburg Historical Society was excited about the visit of three Sherwood Trust representatives on Tuesday morning, June 7, at the Bruce Mansion on Main Street. The plan was to welcome the visitors and arrange a photo accepting the recently awarded grant from the Trust.

The Historical Society had applied for a grant to help pay for painting and repairs to the Bruce Mansion. Before the traditional check presentation photo, Sherwood Trust Project Manager Julia Leavitt gave the photographer a heads up about a “plot twist.”

The Historical Society had asked for $17,000, and the Sherwood Trust decided to up the award to $40,000. Tom Land opened the envelope and saw the check. He passed it to Treasurer Susan Donegan, and soon all the Society members present reacted with emotion to the generous amount the Trust chose to award the non-profit.

The immediate response by the Waitsburg members was to list projects pushed back, including a ramp making the museum ADA accessible, that might now be possible.

One fantastic plot twist.

Dayton, Waitsburg school boards meet over DW Combine

By Beka Compton | THE TIMES

WAITSBURG/DAYTON—The Waitsburg and Dayton School boards met on June 1, 2022, for a joint meeting to discuss details surrounding the future of the DW Athletics Combine. The loosely followed agenda included discipline, middle school athletics, finances, and future joint board meetings.

On the topic of discipline, Dayton School Superintendent Guy Strot and Waitsburg Superintendent Mark Pickel suggested the secondary principals handle disciplinary issues with the combine athletes. This would remove the superintendents from the equation unless their involvement is required.

Athletic Director Sam Korslund said he had observed athletes from the two schools who committed similar disciplinary offenses receiving different outcomes. One example he cited compared one student being marked by their school as ineligible for sports while the athlete from the other district was still able to compete.

Korslund said the lack of disciplinary consistency had caused some issues between athletes. The two boards agreed that consistent communication and awareness of disciplinary problems were key to keeping the combine working.

It was agreed that the Athletic Code of Conduct should be revised to reflect the need for both schools to communicate and implement disciplinary actions on a set standard.

The remaining discussion focused on middle school athletics. Board members from both districts have heard of complaints by parents that middle school students are getting less playing time due to higher athlete turnout.

Dayton School Board member and DW Combine coach Zak Fabian asked if it is a “positive” that students decide not to turn out for a sport due to high turn-out from both districts in a previous season, or letting students play on a non-combined team with fewer players.

Waitsburg board member Lisa Morrow said that it was positive if any student turned out for a sport, and there were multiple points to consider before disbanding the combine for middle school or completely.

“You have to factor in multiple things. You’re a coach, you know this,” Morrow responded to Fabian. “You have kids who are sick each week; you have kids who are ineligible each week. You have kids on family vacations; you have kids away for medical appointments. So, if you split it and you get your ten or fifteen kids, and you need nine to field a (baseball) team, seven of them are ineligible this week. How are you going to play?”

Fabian admitted that a team could not play under those circumstances and then said he would consider it a “life lesson.”

“You can’t have it both ways,” Morrow said. “Then, no kid would get playtime. At least combined, the kids will get some play time.”

Waitsburg School Board Chair Christy House reflected on comments made by students at a recent Waitsburg School Board meeting that validated her concerns over splitting the middle school athletic programs. Students had expressed that it was very difficult to figure out how to play together, and all agreed that splitting the middle schools would negatively impact the future of the high school combine.

Additionally, splitting the athletic programs at the middle school level would mean athletes learn different approaches from district coaches. This could lead to bigger continuity and team building issues after students move to the combined high school program.

Concerns about travel time impacting athletes, especially the younger, middle school athletes, were discussed, as well.

No decisions were made regarding the future of the combine, but the consensus was to move forward as planned.

Wastewater plan addressed at Town Hall event

By Beka Compton | THE TIMES

DAYTON—Residents, business owners, and concerned neighbors gathered at Dayton High School last Wednesday, seeking clarification on the status of the city’s wastewater project. Concerns were raised after the Dayton City Council twice voted against a purchase that was one of the critical steps towards solving the city’s wastewater issue after a decade of planning. “What happens next?” was on everyone’s mind at the June 2 town hall gathering.

Cynthia Wall-Fuller, Washington State Department of Commerce project manager, gave a brief overview of the Small Communities Initiative (SCI) Program. The state formed the SCI to provide technical assistance to small, rural communities that must upgrade their drinking water or wastewater systems to current regulations.

The initiative provides support and funding to assist small, rural communities in meeting the same public health and environmental mandates as larger cities.

Wall-Fuller explained her role in the project was to offer technical support, including formulating action plans that comply with state regulations.

“The most important thing to let the city and the citizens know is that we are here to support Dayton in helping them meet their regulatory requirements as soon as possible,” she said. “Our goal is to get the city, to keep them in compliance, helping them meet the regulations, and keep them safe from any kind of compliance action or civil lawsuit.”

According to Wall-Fuller, a study was performed on the Walla Walla Water Shed, including the Touchet River. The study found that the river did not meet water-quality standards during the low-flow summer months (May-October).

The Department of Ecology and the City of Dayton met in 2007, just before the study was published, according to Wall-Fuller, to begin discussing how to upgrade the current system to meet the low thresholds of acceptable pollutant discharge.

“It is really challenging, the pollutant limits are really low, and the current technology that is out there in the wastewater world just cannot meet the limits to continue discharging into the river in the summer,” Wall-Fuller explained.

In 2008, the Department of Ecology published an implementation plan that gave entities that discharged wastewater into the Touchet River, including the City of Dayton’s wastewater treatment plant, an improvement allocation.

City officials worked with Anderson Perry (AP) to create a facilities plan to explore wastewater options.

A land-treatment system using dispersed water to irrigate non-food crops during the summer months was considered by the city. There were up to seven properties that fit the 160-acre minimum needed for such a plan. Each parcel presented its own challenges, including elevation issues, the cost to pump the water to the fields, and yearly regulatory paperwork.

The implementation plan developed at that time had a ten-year compliance schedule which expired on December 31, 2021. The city can request an extension if it meets all required criteria; however, an extension would be considerably shorter than ten years.

While the city was searching for the best property, they were approached by the Washington Land Trust to discuss an option that would discharge water back into the river and meet regulatory requirements.

In May of 2019, The Confederated Tribes of Umatilla, Anderson Perry, Department of Ecology, Washington Water Trust, and wetlands experts met with city officials to discuss the plan. Advantages of a wetland facility are low maintenance and operations cost, cultural education and repair opportunities, riparian upgrades, and an aesthetically pleasing, low-impact plant. In addition, a wetland facility requires less acreage than an irrigation discharge project.

CCRLD RECEIVES $20,000 GRANT

THE TIMES

DAYTON—The Columbia County Rural Library District in Dayton, WA, has been awarded a grant for $20,000 from the American Library Association (ALA) COVID Library Relief Fund, one of 77 grants awarded to libraries that continue to experience substantial economic hardship due to the coronavirus pandemic.

The ALA COVID Library Relief Fund awards grants to academic, correctional, public, school, and tribal libraries from 32 states and Puerto Rico. The ALA COVID Library Relief Fund is one of the largest non-federal grants available to libraries.

Columbia County Library will use the funds to offset some of the budget cuts on the purchase of books, videos, and other physical materials. Funds will also go towards expanding technology resources available to the public, the purchase of craft materials for the "Take and Make" program, and covering costs of the monthly "Family Story Time," including meals for families and books to be given to each child in attendance.

"On behalf of the library's staff, patrons, supporters, and Board of Trustees, I want to express our heartfelt gratitude to the ALA for this grant award," said Todd Vandenberg, CCRLD Director.

STATE LEGISLATIVE DISTRICT HAS CHANGED FOR COLUMBIA COUNTY VOTERS Most countywide offices up for reelection

THE TIMES

DAYTON— In February, Washington State legislators adopted a new congressional and legislative map, removing Columbia County from Legislative District 16 and placing it in Legislative District 9, with Franklin, Adams, Spokane, Whitman, Asotin, and Garfield counties.

Columbia County voters will be asked to return incumbents Rep. Mary Dye (R) Pomeroy and Rep. Joe Schmick (R) Colfax to the state legislature next January. Both Dye and Schmick are running unopposed for the following two-year terms.

Columbia County remains in U.S. Congressional District 5, with Walla Walla, Lincoln, Ferry, Stevens, Spokane, Pend Oreille, Whitman, Adams, Asotin, Garfield, and Franklin counties.

Redistricting was accomplished by the Washington State Redistricting Commission using data from the 2020 census, which reflected the need to rebalance shifts in population to ensure equal representation across the state.

This year, all elected offices in Columbia County, except for District 1 and District 2 positions on the Board of Columbia County Commissioners, are up for election.

County Auditor Anne Higgins, County Treasurer Carla Rowe, County Prosecutor Dale Slack, County Clerk Kriston Chapman, and Tammy Ketterman for County Assessor will appear on the primary election ballot. They have filed for reelection to four-year terms and are running unopposed. Kimberly Boggs for District Court Judge will advance straight to the general election.

Deputy Jeff Jenkins has filed as a candidate running against Sheriff Joe Helm for a four-year term in the Columbia County Sheriff's Office. This is Jenkins's second bid for the sheriff's office, running against Helm in the 2018 election.

Retired farmer Jack Miller is running against the incumbent Chuck Amerein for a four-year term on the Board of County Commissioners in District 3.

A list of filings for all federal, state, and judicial positions impacting voters in Columbia County, can be found on the Washington Secretary of State website at secretaryofstate@sos.wa.gov/elections/candidates who have filed.

SUPPORT FOR WETLANDS WASTEWATER PLAN

THE TIMES

Last week Neighbors United held a public information meeting about the City of Dayton's proposed Wastewater Treatment project. The meeting was well attended and representatives from the professionals that had worked on this project over the years gave a background review of the project and the current state of the project. This panel answered audience questions with why or why not certain decisions were made to facilitate the project.

These questions were answered to the best of the Wastewater professional's ability and experience.

Alternate solutions were discussed with the pros & cons of these options explained. Including why some of the alternate possibilities would not work in Dayton's situation or be even more expensive.

Some of the newly installed current Dayton City Council want to start this research all over again to achieve a different solution. This would cost the city taxpayers more money. There could be potential state fines, and a worse case potential of bankrupting the City of Dayton. The money already spent on researching & finding solutions to our Wastewater problems would have been wasted.

If some City Council members continue to vote against going forward with the current Wastewater Treatment plan they are doing a major disservice to the City of Dayton and it's residents. Are some of these council members purposely trying to destroy Dayton? Our time is running out to meet WA state's public safety requirements for a treatment facility.

Citizens of Dayton please study the issues and encourage the Dayton City Council to support the Wastewater facility as it is designed. Consider that professional experts in this field were vetted and hired by the City of Dayton to create an efficient and workable solution that will meet WA State regulations.

Dayton School Board hires interim part-time superintendent

By Justin Jaech | THE TIMES

DAYTON- The Dayton School Board held a work session meeting at 6 p.m., June 1, 2022, in the high school auditorium and Zoom. All members of the Dayton School Board were present in the auditorium, Aneasha Dieu, Zac Fabian, Grant Griffen, Chair Jeffrey McCowen, Korinda Wallace, Madison Richardson (Student Representative), and Superintendent Guy Strot.

The consent agenda included the resignation of M.S. math teacher Brenda Henderson and the hiring of Martin Surridge as an HS English teacher, Pam Nolan Beasley as the elementary STEM teacher, and Kelly Steinhoff as M.S. Learning Assistance Program Paraeducator.

Also approved in the consent agenda was the out-of-endorsement status for Kristen Frankie, HS English Teacher. The board passed the Consent Agenda without dissent.

Athletic Director Sam Korslund presented updates on the district's athletic facilities. The director proposed that facilities are maintained and repaired for school and non-school youth athletic groups' use.

After describing the extent of repairs needed, the Athletic Director gave a rough estimate of $150,000 to restore the football and baseball facilities to functional and safe status. The board did not take any specific action during the meeting but did discuss seeking volunteers, donating items such as fill dirt, and possibly purchasing used equipment from other school districts.

District Head Custodian John Delp gave a briefing on the summer maintenance projects. The new entryway to the gym is almost complete, and the staff will continue last year's project of replacing ill-functioning doors and installing security cameras. He also identified emerging maintenance problems that will need to be addressed soon.

The board listened to a proposal to purchase a new K-12 Math Curriculum. The committee tasked with making a recommendation proposed selecting two on-line curriculums, "Open Up High School Mathematics" and "Kendall Hunt Illustrative Mathematics." The committee recommended a pilot project using both curriculums next school year. After the year, the district would compare the programs and choose one.

The proposed math curriculums will be available for public review before the board plans on voting to accept or reject the use of one or both at the June 15, 2022, meeting.

The school board voted unanimously to approve Resolution 2021-03, allowing the district to hire an interim, part-time superintendent and an interim, part-time secondary principal. The board members passed this resolution unanimously and immediately afterward passed a recommendation to hire Richard Stewart as interim superintendent. Mr. Stewart comes to the district through McPherson & Jacobson, LLC, a head-hunting firm for administrators in education. Mr. Stewart has experience as interim and part-time superintendent for districts needing to fill a gap. Recently, he has been part-time Superintendent at Nespelem School District and served as full or part-time Superintendent at La Connor Schools, Eatonville, and Kittitas, all in Washington State.

At 7:39 p.m., The meeting was adjourned at 7:39 p.m., followed by an executive session, closed to the public, to discuss negotiations with classified staff.

Two properties were identified as suitable for the project, one was coming up for sale, and the owner of the second neighboring property was willing to sell.

To help pay for the land purchase, the city arranged for a $999,000, low-interest loan from the Department of Ecology. Under the loan agreement terms, half of the loan amount will be forgiven at the end of the loan period. The City of Dayton has only utilized approximately $10,000 of the loan.

Grant and loan opportunities for conventional water treatment plants are available; however, Wall-Fuller expressed that the funding opportunities for unconventional, innovative projects like the proposed wetlands treatment far exceed the former.

Asked what would happen should the city do nothing to address the issue, Wall-Fuller said Dayton would face fines and fees without indicating how large or small. She said it would also open the city to third-party citizen lawsuits.

"If you get sued by Waste Action Project, say, they take you to court, the schedule gets set... they don't care if you need to borrow $12 million, $50 million, $10 million, or if it costs citizens $100, $150 per month, it really squeezes communities, backs them into a corner, if it gets to that point," she explained.

When asked what option the council is currently pursuing, Dayton Mayor Zac Weatherford said, "that's a good question!" He noted that the previous council was in support of the wetlands project.

On April 6, the current council voted to table the real estate resolution that would allow the purchase of the identified properties, pending the results of a special-use permit. The permit was approved, but at an April 12 meeting, the council voted down the purchase authorization by majority vote.

During a workshop on April 27, the council discussed options, including re-negotiating the proposed land sales terms, contacting a neighboring property owner, and exploring land use designs.

On May 10, during a regular council meeting, a similar resolution offering approximately $100,000 less for the purchase price was again denied.

"Since then, we have been working internally to answer questions that council members have brought forth," Mayor Zac Weatherford said. He said he has talked to another potential landowner and has explored land use facilities, among other ideas, but he was still unsure how the council would move forward. He said he doubted the two original landowners would reconsider the third offer.

When asked, Wall-Fuller said that she spoke to a manufacturer of water-storage tanks suggested for use by Councilperson Kyle Anderson at a previous city council meeting. She said the tanks are relatively portable and hold approximately 400,000 gallons of water. The city needs storage for as much as 300,000 gallons per day, requiring 15 to 20 tanks at an estimated $400,000 per unit.

Wall-Fuller said the tanks are not approved for this use and would take an extensive process taking time the city does not have to gain approval. Tanks would require roughly the same amount of acreage as the favored wetlands facility.

Weatherford said that he encourages citizens in Dayton and Columbia County to reach out to their elected officials to encourage forward movement on the project. He noted that there is a 'ton of information' regarding the project at the Dayton City Hall that is available upon request.

"We need to know what our council wants to do. The city, and all these other entities before you, cannot move forward with anything unless we know that when we go to present it to the council, they will be in support of it," he said.

Weatherford noted that the current council was split on the project. The initial purchase resolution presented was denied in a 3-4 vote; a 3-3 vote shut down the second resolution.

DAYTON LIBRARY AWARDED VIRTUAL REALITY IN 360 GRANT

Library and Dayton Historic Depot will work together on VR tour with grant funds.

THE TIMES

DAYON—The Columbia County Rural Library District (CCRLD) in Dayton, WASH., has been awarded a "Virtual Reality in 360" grant providing the library with the tools and specialized training needed to create a virtual experience. The experience should tell a story about something that has importance to the community.

The library will partner with the Dayton Historical Depot Society to create a virtual reality (VR) tour of the Depot so anyone, anywhere can explore the oldest standing train depot in Washington. Once created, the tour will be hosted on the Washington State Library's website and will be linked to the Dayton Historical Depot and CCRLD websites.

The grant includes funding for training and a 360 Virtual Reality "kit" containing everything needed to record and create this experience.

Funding for the VR 360 Project is provided by the Institute of Museum and Library Services and administered by the Library Service and Technology Act, through Washington State Library, a division of the Office of the Secretary of State.

WAITSBURG STUDENT AND HIS FAMILY FACE MEDICAL CRISIS

THE TIMES

On May 30, Waitsburg-youngster Jace Grende was life-flighted to Harborview Medical Center with a spontaneous brain bleed. There, it was discovered that Jace had a brain tumor, and a successful surgery removed most of the glioma that was discovered.

A secondary tumor was found on his thalamus and is inoperable. Jace has a long road ahead of him, but he's a tough kid and is giving cancer the biggest fight yet.

Jace, his parents, Brad and Abby, and his two little brothers live in Waitsburg. Abby is now staying in Seattle with Jace, and Brad is traveling back and forth.

Doctors have told the family that it could be weeks before Jace fully wakes up from the side effects of the brain surgeries, and that rehab could take months.

Donation funds to help the family with extra medical and travel expenses have been set up at the Waitsburg and Dayton Banner Bank branches. The family has also created a Venmo account which is available to donors through the QR code printed below.

Celebrating Retirement

My first year of retirement from Waitsburg Schools just zipped by! I went with three of my four sisters on my first zipline adventure to commemorate the occasion. It zipped by also!

The Coeur d'Alene 7-line zip tour consisted entirely of tree-top platforms. There were two high-swinging sky bridges to cross, and twice we belayed down to the next level. There is not a lot of walking in this family-friendly adventure; just zipping along above Beauty Bay, through trees and gorgeous scenery.

Timberline Adventures starts with a 12-mile van ride; after putting on your gear, you ride in a UTV on a mile-long, 800-foot vertical climb to get to the first platform. The guides are very safety-oriented, have great personalities, and make the adventure more enjoyable with suggestions for different ways to zip, including "showing faith" by going backward, "the jellyfish" or "the spiderman" move while belaying.

Give Timberline Adventures a try if you are at least seven years old and between 80 and 260 pounds. You won't be disappointed.

Thanks to my sisters, Sandra who gifted me the zipline adventure, and Janet and Joanie who joined the celebration. Time does Zip by!

It's a Parade

By Vicki Sternfeld-Rossi | THE TIMES

It was great fun to see the Celebration Days Parade this year. It brought back so many parade memories, from attending and marching in parades. I marched in New York with my 4-H troop. Later, as a High School band member in Tucson, I marched in a heavy wool uniform in 100-degree heat. In Flagstaff, where I went to college, I continued in the band and marched in ten below zero weather. In Los Angeles, I was just an avid spectator past my marching days. A Los Angeles parade would include out-of-work actors, Uber drivers, Door Dash cars, and a lot of scooters.

However, before marching in community parades and still in New York, my parents braved the insanity and took me, my brother, and my sister to the Macy's Day parade. Brave, because we were young (around seven, five, and three), the crowds were enormous, and the weather cold. We were restless after being in the car, the subway, and finally walking to the parade area. I'm still amazed they didn't lose any of us in the crowd. Giant balloons were soaring overhead with floats with singers and dancers beneath them. We were filled with awe and excitement to get a glance at the Parade Marshall that year, Shirley Temple.

The day was topped off with lunch and hot chocolate at the Horn and Hardart automat. A "restaurant" that consisted of walls of food in little cubbies behind glass doors. To buy food, you would look through the windows, put in your coins, and open the door with your selection. Once you took your food and closed the door, people in the back immediately restocked the empty cubical.

Although the parade in Waitsburg last month was not as enormous as the Macy's Day parade, it did beat some of the parades I marched in.

The Tucson Independence Day parade was brutally hot, and our band always seemed to be behind the slew of rodeo horses. Trying to march in perfect formation while dodging horse manure is never fun, but we all love a challenge.

Although the Celebration Days event did not have the glitz and glamor of the Macy's Parade, it did make me appreciate living in farm country. I know farming equipment has evolved, become safer and more efficient. However, looking at the size of the equipment in the parade, was jaw-dropping to me.

When I drive the local highways and see the farmers on their combines, working on the sloping hills, they look like miniature figures. Up close, wow! Those are big machines controlled by a single person. It's impressive and inspiring. As I look at the finger I cut using my food processor today, I'm glad it's not me driving; who knows what limbs I could lose.

I was also impressed with the horsemanship I saw, especially the youngsters. With all the noises, whistles, alarms, and activity going on around them, it amazes me to see the control the riders have over these enormous animals. I took horseback riding lessons when I was young. The horses were probably one hundred years old and on sedatives, and it was still scary.

Watching the children's excitement at the parade (or is it the candy) is always entertaining. I did learn that there is an annual parade in the Seattle area that features nude bicyclists; now that would be entertaining! I wouldn't even need tons of candy thrown at me for me to add it to my list of favorite parades.

MLB changing the baseball is nothing new

By Eric Umphrey | THE TIMES

Baseball has made several changes to the ball over the game's history. Before 1876 baseballs were not uniform. Pitchers made the balls used in games, and no two were alike. In 1876 the National League was founded, and a pitcher named A.G. Spalding convinced the league to use his design with a rubber core as the model. It was the beginning of a partnership that would last for a century and create the company called Spalding Sports goods that still exists today.

During the 1910 World Series, the league approved modifying the game ball to use a center core made of cork. Home runs and runs scored per game increased during the next three years. However, pitchers adapted and began scuffing the baseball, bringing scoring back down.

In 1920, the yarn used in baseballs was replaced with higher-quality wool imported from Australia. Machine winders also began to be used. Stronger yarn and tighter winding resulted in the Live-Ball Era, and complaints about the new "rabbit ball" started. The home run rate tripled from a decade earlier, and scoring increased over a run a game.

The leagues attempted to deaden the ball with another modification in 1931. The cork center was replaced by a combination of cork and ground rubber. The changes lowered the home run rate and dropped scoring to just under five runs per game.

In December of 1937, the National League chose to further "deaden" the ball, and the American League kept their ball unchanged. In March 1938, Washington Senators owner Clark Griffith with the Bureau of Standards to test the performance of the two league's baseballs.

The resulting report stated, "no difference of any practical significance. Some National League balls are more lively than some American League balls, and some are less lively."

During World War II, rubber was needed for the war effort as the fighting impacted the supply chain. In 1943, major league baseball removed rubber from baseballs and replaced it with latex made from the dry sap from the Balata tropical tree. League commissioners claimed no differences between the new Balata balls and baseballs using rubber.

The players and team owners quickly found this was far from the truth. The use of the balata balls led to a significant drop in scoring. The ball was changed many times during the 1943 season until scoring went up to an acceptable level. In 1944, needs from the war effort spurred the development of synthetic rubber, which replaced the poorly performing balata from baseballs.

Over the next thirty-two years, only a few changes were made to the ball and appeared not to make any differences to home run rates or scoring. In 1958 balls were made an eighth of an inch thicker and an eighth of an ounce heavier. In 1974 covering of the baseball changed from horsehide to cowhide due to a horsehide shortage. In 1976 baseball ended its partnership with Spalding at the end of the season over a proposed increase of ten cents per ball over two years or a five percent increase in the contract. MLB selected Rawlings as the new supplier for the 1977 season.

In the late nineties and early 2000s, complaints of a juiced ball began again. It turned out that it wasn't the baseballs but some of the juiced players during the "Steroid Era" of baseball. In 2000, 5,963 home runs were hit, which was a record for home runs in a season. With drug testing in place for players, attention went back to the baseball's construction.

Research by Rob Arthur found evidence of changes in the composition of the baseball core. Writers Ben Lindbergh and Mitchell Lichtman obtained and tested several baseballs and found that balls produced in 2015 were slightly bouncier and balls made in 2016 were somewhat smaller with lower seams. Balls produced after 2015 were different than those made before.

On June 5, 2018, Major League Baseball purchased Rawlings, the company producing the game's baseballs since 1977. MLB paid $395 million for the manufacturer, stating it wanted more control over baseball production. Since the purchase, baseball commissioner Rob Manfred admitted that baseballs used during the 2019 season had less drag, enabling them to travel farther.

Last year MLB used two different types of balls during the season. This year, the league admitted increasing drag to deaden the ball so it won't fly as far. Expect the tinkering to continue as baseball tries to find the sweet spot for home runs and runs scored per game.

Next state land free days, June 11, 12, and 19

Discover Passes are not required to park on those three days

THE TIMES

OLYMPIA—The Washington State Parks and Recreation Commission invites visitors to enjoy a state park on Saturday, June 11 in celebration of National Get Outdoors Day, Sunday, June 12 in recognition of Free Fishing Day, and Sunday, June 19 in honor of Juneteenth. Visitors are not required to display a Discover Pass for day-use visits to a Washington state park or on lands managed by the Washington Department of Natural Resources (DNR) or Washington Department of Fish and Wildlife (WDFW) on these dates.

Juneteenth commemorates the emancipation of enslaved African Americans in the United States. It officially became a federal holiday on June 17, 2021, and now marks an annual free day for state lands.

The free days align with legislation that created the Discover Pass. Discover Passes cost $30 for an annual pass or $10 for a one-day permit. The pass is required for vehicle access to state recreation lands managed by Washington State Parks, WDFW, and DNR. The Discover Pass legislation indicated that State Parks could designate up to 12 free days when the pass would not be required to visit state recreation lands.

The remaining 2022 State Parks free days are as follows:

- Saturday, Sept. 24 – National Public Lands Day
- Monday, Oct. 10 – World Mental Health Day
- Friday, Nov. 11 – Veterans Day
- Friday, Nov. 25 – Native American Heritage Day

The Discover Pass provides daytime access to state parks. Overnight visitors in state parks are charged fees for camping and overnight accommodations. Day access is included in the overnight fee. For information about the Discover Pass, visit www.DiscoverPass.wa.gov.

PG Wine of the Month

By Paul Gregutt | THE TIMES

Rex Hill 2021 Pinot Noir Rosé

For a number of reasons, the best dry rosé wines have gotten more expensive, especially those Oregon rosés made exclusively from Pinot Noir grapes. Pinot Noir is costly to grow and turning it into rosé doesn't make that part of the process any cheaper. Additionally, the fires of 2020 meant a number of wineries lost some or most of their crop, so 2021 is a recovery vintage. This estate grown, pale copper, generously flavorful wine mixes strawberries, blood oranges, watermelon, and jicama across a lovely and lush palate. It trails out through the finish with a lovely touch of white chocolate. This is one of the best rosés I've tasted all year. (Beautiful package too!)

WHS ALUM RECEIVES AWARD FOR NEWSCAST 'SPREADING LIKE WILDFIRE'

Waitsburg High alumna Holly Menino wins Emmy

THE TIMES

NEW DIRECTOR NAMED FOR WWCC'S INSTITUTE FOR ENOLOGY AND VITICULTURE

THE TIMES

WALLA WALLA—Walla Walla Community College (WWCC) has announced the completion of a comprehensive search for a new director of the college's highly acclaimed Institute for Enology and Viticulture. Stylianos Logothetis is slated to begin his new role at WWCC on July 6.

Logothetis has more than 25 years of experience in the industry, including work as an oenologist, university professor, and industrial consultant to the wine industry. He holds a Master of Philosophy and a Ph.D. degree in Yeast Physiology and Fermentation Biotechnology from Abertay Dundee University in Scotland. Logothetis is a member of the Scottish Microbiology Society, European Federation of Biotechnology, and International Wine Organization (OIV).

Stylianos Logothetis

The director position leads WWCC's degree program in Enology and Viticulture. In this position, Logothetis will also manage the estate vineyards, wine production, and winery operations while collaborating with the local wine-growing and winery industry.

"One of the most rewarding aspects of my work is the professional growth of my students and their success in the careers that follow," Logothetis said. "I am thrilled to be a member of the nationally celebrated Enology and Viticulture program at Walla Walla Community College."

Logothetis replaces interim director Sabrina Lueck who is heading to Germany to work for the highly revered winegrower Weingut Keller.

WWCC's Institute for Enology & Viticulture, founded in 2000, is the nation's premier academic institute for hands-on experience in winemaking and viticulture practices. Students from all over the United States are drawn to the 15,000 square foot facility, built in 2003, that houses classrooms and a fully operational and bonded winery called College Cellars—the first student-operated commercial winery at a community college.

The winery and vineyards are managed entirely by students and faculty as part of the intensive, hands-on learning experience. Students start during the annual "crush" and learn grape selection, growing, harvesting, fermenting, barreling, blending, and marketing, while also receiving valuable real-life experience through internships.

The program and its winery have received widespread recognition from industry publications like Wine Enthusiast and Wine Advocate, and numerous accolades in regional and national competitions. More than 400 students have graduated from the Institute, and most stay in the region. Their success is seen as a key contributor to the growth of the industry in the Walla Walla Valley and beyond. Case in point: more than half of the 95+ point "outstanding" and "extraordinary" Washington wines reviewed by "Robert Parker's Wine Advocate" were made by WWCC Enology & Viticulture graduates.

"As director of the Institute for Enology and Viticulture, I will bring all of my expertise and passion for wine education and production to the students, my colleagues, and the Walla Walla Valley wine community," Logothetis said.

Orange Rhubarb Panna Cotta

With summer just around the corner, and the spring weather finally cooperating, the season for outdoor entertaining has officially started in our backyard. Fresh herbs and wildflowers perfume the air around our deck, and warmth from the late afternoon sun lingers well into dinner time. This week, inspired by the robust rhubarb in the garden, I set out to make a dessert with a taste to match this lovely time of year. Here, a delicate, creamy panna cotta is punctuated with a bottom layer of roasted rhubarb and citrus compote. Bright and balanced with a distinctive tartness, this makes a memorable sweet course.

Ingredients:

For the compote:

- 12 ounces rhubarb, sliced into 1-inch segments
- 2 oranges, zest of one and segments from both (see directions)
- ¾ cup sugar

For the panna cotta:

- 1 ½ teaspoons powdered gelatin, unflavored
- 7 tablespoons sugar
- 1 ¼ cups heavy cream
- ½ teaspoon vanilla
- Zest of one orange (see directions)
- ½ teaspoon kosher salt, (or ¼ teaspoon fine sea salt)
- 1 ¾ cups buttermilk

Directions:

Use a microplane, or the finest side of a box grater, to finely grate the zest of one orange. Place in a bowl and set aside. Use a vegetable peeler to make long strips of zest off the second orange. Stack the strips on a cutting board and use a sharp knife to cut into thin matchsticks. Peel the pith off the two oranges and separate the segments. Slice segments in half crosswise and combine with the matchsticks.

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Place rhubarb, zest matchsticks, and orange segments in an 8 x 8-inch baking dish. Scatter the sugar over the top and toss all together. Set aside for 30 minutes to allow rhubarb to start releasing some juices.

Set baking dish in hot oven and roast for 15 minutes. Stir, then return to oven and roast for another 15 minutes. Roast for a final 10 to 15 minutes, or until the rhubarb is very tender, slightly golden, and the juices have reduced. Remove from oven and allow to cool slightly in pan. Divide compote between 6 to 8 ramekins or small mason jars. Spread the compote evenly over the bottoms. Place ramekins on a sheet pan and set aside to continue cooling while you prepare the panna cotta.

Pour 1 tablespoon of cold water into a small bowl and sprinkle the gelatin evenly over the surface. Set aside and allow gelatin to soften for 5 minutes.

Meanwhile, combine sugar, heavy cream, vanilla, salt, and the reserved finely grated orange zest to a medium saucepan. Set pan over medium heat and gently heat. Stir while heating to fully dissolve the sugar. Do not let the cream boil! Heat for about 4 minutes until cream comes almost to a simmer, steam will start rising but no bubbles should break the surface. Reduce the heat to very low and add the bloomed gelatin. Stir for a minute until gelatin fully dissolves, then remove from heat.

Pour mixture through a fine mesh sieve into a large measuring cup or a bowl with a pouring spout. Whisk in the cold buttermilk to fully combine with the cream mixture. Carefully pour the mixture into the prepared ramekins over the compote. Pour slowly to avoid large bubbles forming and distribute evenly between the dishes. Gently tap the bottom of the ramekins, then use a toothpick to break any little bubbles that float to the top.

Cover the ramekins with plastic, or the lids of the mason jars, and carefully transfer sheet pan to refrigerator. Chill until fully set about six hours or overnight. Serve chilled.

Notes:

Since you are using the zest and the fruit of the oranges, look for the best quality organic oranges you can find. You can use regular navel oranges or experiment with different citrus. This week I used some lovely blood oranges, which added a gorgeous ruby color to the compote.

Have fun with the dishes you use for setting your panna cottas. This week, I used small jam size mason jars, the metal lids coming in handy for covering while chilling. Decorative ramekins or vintage teacups make fun presentations for your guests. Stemmed cocktail glasses are also an eye-catching choice. No matter the dish, this creamy and delicate dessert is sure to wow your guests at your next late spring dinner party. Enjoy!

END OF YEAR FIELD DAY FUN AT WAITSBURG MIDDLE SCHOOL

It is hard to be at the end of a Tug of War rope when dad is the coach.

It's not always the strongest team that wins, but that didn't stop the middle schoolers from giving tug o' war their best go!

Waitsburg Middle School students ditched the classroom on June 3 and headed over to the football field for fun and games! Water breaks were necessary on the warm spring afternoon.

PHMS teacher Heather Ball got a good laugh as students attempted to blow a ping pong ball across the water-filled cups.
